Wesleyan College Board Votes To Offer Conservatory Property To Alumnae Group

Dear Alumnae:

In keeping with my desire that all alumnae may be informed and included in Wesleyan affairs, I shall relinquish my space to a very important report.

The report is from the Committee of College Trustees appointed at the May meeting of the Trustees to study the disposition of the College Street properties. This Committee met the evening of October 16; the Trustees met the next day. The report was recommended to the Trustees and they voted to accept the recommendation.

There is much elation!

This is so new that plans are unformed. An Alumnae Board of Managers meeting has been scheduled for November 5.

Wesleyan is thriving as you see thoughout the magazine.

The report follows:

- a. That the Alumnae Association be allowed to take over without the payment of rent the management and operation of the Comer Building and possibly the Dining Hall.
- b. That they assume all maintenance and operating expenses, except insurance, and receive all income from the specific properties which are turned over to them.
- c. That a recapture clause be inserted under which the properties may be taken back under certain conditions, but in that event that an equitable basis be stipulated for reimbursing the Alumnae Association for expenditures, if any, which substantially improve the property.
- d. That the committee be authorized to report back to the Executive Committee should they find any occasion to do so.
- e. That the foregoing statement of intent contemplates that Roberts Hall and Georgia Hall and Pierce Chapel will not be included in any such agreement.

Members of the special committee which studied the College Street properties of Wesleyan included C. Baxter Jones, Mrs. Alonzo Domingos, W. A. Fickling, R. R. Trice, T. D. Willis, Jr., Dr. Lester Rumble, Dr. Leonard Cochran, D. A. Turner, Bishop Arthur J. Moore, and Leo B. Huckabee. Dr. Martin and C. R. Peden were ex-officio members.

Sincerely,

Irene (Worth) Hobby

National Alumnae President

Dr. Henry's message to the students was inspiring. He told them they were here seeking a certain goal. "Aims begin with dreams; they are not measured in terms of miles, years, or experiences. They always must begin with YOU and NOW. Be careful what you dream, because dreams can become a reality." Continuing he said, "It is because of the dreams and the ambitions of students of the past that we have our civilization of today. You cannot leave God out of your learning because God is in music, God is in literature and God is in art . . . all motivated by Divine Love. 'In the beginning God . . . ' In your quest for knowledge during your college life, know God, work not under his surveillance but under His guidance."

Dr. Luther C. Harrell of Atlanta, director of Georgia Methodist Council on Higher Education, was also on the formal program. He led a special litany of rededication of the college.

Welcoming the students and guests were Dr. B. Joseph Martin, president, and Temple Wilson of Winter Park, Florida, president of College Government Association.

Others who contributed to this impressive ceremony were Dr. William J. Hinson, Chaplain, soloist Mr. Norman McLean, Mr. John O'Steen accompanist, Dr. Samuel Akers, Dr. William Hoppe. The Reverend Ned Steele, pastor of Centenary Methodist Church closed the service with prayer.

Students and guests attending the formal opening were invited to the student lounge to a reception.

Wesleyan College had begun its 120th academic year.

Mrs. Wm. Dickson Anderson

An attentive and enthusiastic audience of Wesleyan students, faculty and staff heard Jennie Loyall Anderson speak on Wesleyan history September 23. She is a distinguished alumna, former alumnae director, and has long been considered an authority on Wesleyan history and traditions.

In her speech she linked Wesleyan's accomplishments of the past with predictions of the future by Lloyds of London.

"An amazing prediction," she said, "Is that by the year 1985 Atlanta, Georgia, will be the largest city in the world with Charlotte, North Carolina and other intervening cities becoming mere suburbs!"

From Washington, D. C. comes another prediction of the same period which concerns all of the United States of America. Great increase in population, houses, furnishings, schools, churches, airplanes, medicine, travel, vacation. Prosperity is expected . . . no big war, nor world war, between Russia and the United States. The American leaders in business and industry are making extensive plans for the future.

"How must you prepare for this exciting and challenging golden age that lies ahead of you?" she asked,

Speaks at Student Assembly

"In such a changing world what should be changeless? What are the Eternal Values?"

She turned back from 1985 for 150 years to 1835 to see how men in Georgia of that day wrought a new civilization in a new country.

1835 was an important year in Georgia, the year that the citizens of Macon first laid plans for Higher Education of their daughters. Macon was only twelve years old when the Reverend Elijah Sinclair inspired leading citizens with the idea of a Female College. The Georgia conference of the Methodist Church was to meet soon and in response to a request from Macon citizens the conference agreed to foster the Female College.

A hand-written list with the amount of each gift of the first benefactors is preserved in the Wesleyan Library, she told the assembly.

Elam Alexander, the master builder of Macon was selected to erect a suitable building.

After debates and defeats in the Georgia Legislature, eventually the charter was granted to Georgia Female College, today's Wesleyan, the first college in the world, chartered, to grant degrees to women.

Dr. Martin Speaks At Convocation

Dr. B. Joseph Martin, president of Wesleyan College, told approximately 575 students and faculty members, Wednesday morning, September 25, that the result of education is judged not on what the student has learned but on what the student becomes.

Speaking at the school's first chapel assembly of the new school term, Dr. Martin said:

"Our Christian colleges must always remain fervently Christian, but also must remain academically sound." Teachers must be capable as well as consecrated and "colleges cannot allow shallow substitutes of good intentions and pure motives for objective achievement in the shape of education."

A good Christian teacher should be professionally trained, familiar with his field, conversant with the latest findings in his field, possess a flair for teaching and be a Christian, Dr. Martin said.

The fact that Methodism believes in higher education is shown by the fact that there are one or more Methodist colleges in 42 of the 48 states, he said.

Ruth Jean Simonson: A Tribute

Mary Pate '48-50 and G. W. Gignilliat, Jr.

Ruth Jean Simonson, head of the Wesleyan Speech Department, died on July 5, 1957, three weeks after suffering her first heart attack. She had served Wesleyan and Wesleyan students for twenty years. Though she came to Wesleyan as a mature teacher after preparation at Northwestern University and Carnegie Tech and after a teaching experience at West Virginia University, and though she worked hard as President of the Georgia Speech Association and as a member of various national associations, she considered the Weslevan Department of Speech and Drama as her real life

As we think of Ruth Simonson we remember her qualities: integrity, courage, endurance, cheerfulness, religion, loyalty. And how well we remember the glimpses that showed the woman: Ruth Simonson commanding the attention of a social group with her clearly enunciated "I'm here to tell you"; Ruth Simonson, before the play, concluding her detailed criticism of the actors by telling them as they go on stage, "But above all have fun"; Ruth Simonson after days and nights of directing a play, sweeping to her seat in the audience, well groomed, smiling, confident, knowing her girls would do their best; Ruth Simonson after her heart attack, sitting erect in the hospital bed, talking lightly about the grim ride she had alone before she could reach help ("Wasn't this the silliest thing for me to do?"), then turning to thank the visitor for sending flowers, insisting on lending him a book she enjoyed, planning what she was to do next year for her girls.

Above all she believed in her students. She taught people rather than courses. To her the theatre was a means of developing personality and human life to its fullest. "Do you tell your students how to act their parts?" she was asked. "No," she replied, "I encourage them to find their own way." No wonder that she was such a tremendous force in developing her students and that they admired her deeply. The dedication of the Fine Arts section of the 1943 VETERROPT carries this summary of her influence: "To an ideal teacher and ideal woman, Miss Ruth Jean Simonson, head of the Speech Department, whose charm and vivacity enliven our campus and whose knowledge and ability inspire our confidence and love.'

In conclusion let us say that she carried out her convictions as a teacher. Her life fulfilled her words: "I believe that there are many college professors who devote their lives to teaching because they feel that it is an honored, important and exciting profession. My father was one of these, so this is my heritage, and from my earliest childhood I have tried to live and work in such an environment." And the best comment on her success in following this ideal was written by Frank Mc-Mullen of the Yale Drama Department: "She was one of the very few fine teachers of the educational theatre. She was of course more than an instructor of the classroom. She was a great human being."

Note: The Drama Club is establishing within the Speech Department a Scholarship Fund in memory of Miss Simonson. This information came to the Alumnae Office from Caroline Browder, President and Delores Tyre, Secretary and Treasurer.

A Tribute to Miss Anne Chenault Wallace

by Marian Elder Jones

Miss Anne Chenault Wallace, artist, writer, and teacher, lives no longer in her mountain home in that beautiful valley between Asheville and Black Mountain. Partially blind when she retired from Wesleyan some twenty years ago, and totally blind during the last years before her death in August, now she sees. Like Kipling, in his "L'Envoi" she is free to paint "with brushes of comet's hair."

Though her vocation was teaching speech and drama she spent her summers and leisure hours painting mountain landscapes, and autumn trees. Those of us who were her pupils marvelled that, though her pictures were, to us, works of art that hung on her studio walls, she never considered them finished. She would take them down, and with critical eye and skillful hand she would add touches, always striving for a truer representation of nature.

It was the same way with her teaching. She taught her pupils to "lean on nature's corset;" to breathe deeply; to overcome self-consciousness; and to allow the voice to express thought and emotion freely, without tension. She understood girls, and was a sympathetic friend, rarely censuring but ever and always encouraging them to be their best selves. Her aim for her pupils was personal development of charm, character, and leadership qualities, not for professional accomplishment on the stage. Drama, she used, as a method, in personal development, not a goal to be attained.

She had no staff of teachers during those years from 1915 to 1935. Always she was loyal to Wesleyan and worked long hours overtime in order to accommodate the large enrollment that she always had. In those days pupils paid extra for the fine arts subjects; and Miss Wallace knew that every pupil she taught helped to swell the college finances. Of herself she gave unsparingly and dynamically.

Highly idealistic, yet with a realist's understanding, never selfish, resentful or bitter she met her successes as well as her defeats with a calm poise of spirit. To those of us who knew her well we shall be continually grateful for what her service meant to the Wesleyan she loved, and to us, her pupils and her friends.

At the annual dinner of the American Artists Professional League during its national convention in New York City, Mrs. H. E. Ogden Campbell was elected to the honor roll of the association. John Scott Williams, president of the league, presented her with a citation "for providing opportunities for young exhibitors and for encouraging the fine traditions of American art."

Mrs. Campbell was born in Eastman, granddaughter of William Pitt Eastman, for whom the city was named. She spent many of the early years of her life in Macon, where she attended Wesleyan. The outstanding collection of paintings by leading American artists at Wesleyan College is called the Campbell Art Collection in appreciation of her work in its behalf.

New Infirmary Now In Use

Facilities for sixteen patients and two nurses are now in use in the beautiful new infirmary located across the driveway from the portico of Banks Hall.

The fireproof brick building is classic Georgian in design and was built at a cost of $100,000.

The interior includes the following: 2 wards and 4 double bedrooms with adequate closet space and adjacent bathrooms; 2 bedrooms for nurses, lobby, staff lounge, dining room, kitchen, examination room, and doctor's office.

Construction of the infirmary released dormitory space for 14 additional students — space which is filled this year.

Tri-K's of '61 Honored

Early in September, the Macon Tri-K's of '61 were welcomed as freshmen Wesleyannes at a festive "pirate party" held in their honor by the Macon girls of the present sophomore, junior, and senior classes. The home of Jackie Davis, class of '60 was the scene of the gaiety. Greeting the new Tri-K's on Jackie's front lawn was the life-sized imitation of a pirate ship, complete with skull and cross-bones.

Further setting the mood for the party were the bright decorations, entertainment, and refreshments, which were all in keeping with the Tri-K theme; even the elaborate center piece for the table—a small pirate ship surrounded by pipe-stem Tri-K's on a sea of red covered with white lace.

Everyone enjoyed the games about Wesleyan and several freshmen won as prizes small articles useful for school.

After the serving of ice cream and cake bearing the Tri-K emblem, the group departed almost bursting with Wesleyan spirit and enthusiasm.

Silver Anniversary—1958

Dear Class of '33:

Believe it or not, this is the year for our 25th class reunion. So let's start early and clear the decks for returning to Wesleyan and renewing our friendships and our love for our Alma Mater.

Before graduating, I remember many of us saying—"Well, there's one thing for sure, I'll see you on our 25th Anniversary"—so this is it. The date is May 30 and 31.

I know I don't look the same and there's not much I can do about that, but I feel just as I did twenty-five years ago, and we can start talking just where we stopped. Don't we have lots to catch up on? Please come back so we can have a grand time together.

Remember that the 25th reunion class always sends a Silver Anniversary gift—it is generally a gift of money sent in to the Alumnae Office "earmarked" Silver Anniversary. This is separate from our usual Loyalty Fund. Let's make a real contribution to our college.

I am certainly looking forward to seeing you in May.

With love as always,

"Chris"
